BRITISH DRAFT DEBT NOTE TO UNITED STATES

Asked by the Hon. George Lambert if commons would be consulted before "further payment of war loan interests is made," MacDonald replied that if requested through the usual channels, it would be given careful consideration "but it is not to the public interest to have debate at this moment."

STIMSON AND MILLS CONFER WITH HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—The war debts crisis was thoroughly canvassed today by conference with Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Secretary of State Stimson.

"We're waiting now to hear more from Britain and the other nations," Mills said at conclusion of the conference.

"We frankly know no more than has been published—but will know a lot more in the next 48 hours," Mills said.

Mills and Stimson were closeted with the chief executive for more than an hour.

Mills, after the conference reiterated that the debt question is "now up to congress," and added "it appears possible that Gov. Roosevelt doesn't think so."

"I think the conference with Roosevelt last week was a good one," Mills said, "and we still have so far, no further word to cause us to change our attitude that the payments must be made."

"Until we hear from them, we cannot say very much more. They may say they cannot pay—and then what are you going to do? We'll have to wait and see."

Secretary Mills said the conference had considered the 1933-34 budget, and that the president's budget message "is rounding into shape."

Secretary Stimson left without comment.

PROTEST PARDONS PROPOSED BY GOV. ROLPH AS ACTION DESTROYING RESPECT FOR LAW

Declaring that if Governor Rolph releases persons from state prisons and county jails who have been convicted of violating the Wright act, the act will increase the corrupting influence of the criminal element of the state and do much to destroy respect for law, the Men's Bible class of the Santa Ana M. E. church has sent Governor Rolph a letter expressing the opinion of members on the matter.

The letter points out that the persons under consideration have been fairly tried in courts and found guilty and should serve their sentences to completion.

Following is the text of the letter which was sent to the chief executive and which was signed by a committee from the Bible class composed of W. C. Baker, W. G. Diehl and S. M. Davis:

Reasons Given
"Press dispatches indicate you are considering releasing from state, county and city prisons, persons who have been convicted and sent to prison for violation of the Wright act of California, which is a part of the enforcement act sustaining the Eighteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

"If these reports are correct in interpretation of your attitude on these matters we, the Men's Bible class of First Methodist Sunday school, First Methodist Episcopal church, Santa Ana, express our disapproval of such action for the following reasons:

"Violation of law destroys the efficiency and morals of the state and nation. A government undermining its own laws is headed for destruction."

"The fundamental principle of the Wright act is in the Constitution of the United States which you have sworn to uphold in assuming the duties of chief executive of the state of California."

"Your action, if carried out, our state."

"As chief executive of the state of California in our judgment your duty is to strive to improve conditions of all the people, creating a demand for the best by eliminating corrupting influences of one violators of law. If these persons are released from prison without completing their term of sentence it will increase the corrupting influence of the criminal element of our state."

TAKE TO HOSPITAL

Suffering from appendicitis, Postmaster Terry E. Stephenson was in St. Joseph's hospital today following an attack at his residence, 1522 North Broadway, Sunday.

Attending physicians, including a widely known specialist from Los Angeles, had not determined how soon an operation would be advisable.

Stephenson had been in excellent health until Friday when he complained of a slight stomach disorder, but he was at his office in the Federal building Saturday and did not suffer severely until late yesterday.

He spent last night "as comfortably as could be expected under the circumstances," the hospital announced. He is not permitted to see friends.

LAMB REPORTS COLLECTIONS OF $809,518

With first installment tax payments, to date, totalling $809,518.49 County Tax Collector J. C. Lamb today said he does not expect the delinquency for the first half will reach the estimated 10 per cent figure.

"Property owners of the county seem to have prepared for tax payment and are making remittances in time to save the 10 per cent penalty that goes on all first installment payments not made by 5 o'clock December 5," he said.

He also pointed out that there had been very little complaint over the amount of tax bills and many words of praise for the reduction in the rate this year.

According to Lamb's books, the $809,518.49, paid up to this date is $155,751.29 more than the amount paid into his office at this time last year. On November 28, 1931, the total first installment tax paid, was $653,767.29.

Lamb is urging all tax payers to co-operate with his office to avoid congestion on the final day that payment can be made. He is urging that tax payers bring their bills with them when they come to make their payments. If they have no bills, new ones will be sent out upon request or may be obtained at the office. He is also asking that when payment is made at the office that checks and bills be ready to save long waits in line.

Property owners who plan to mail their checks to the office are urged to be careful to draw their checks on the right bank and in the correct amount of the bill. They are also warned to remember and sign the checks. Lamb said that it is surprising the number of checks received every year that are unsigned.

"Time is necessary to return to the maker, in many cases, will cause the payment to go delinquent. He is also pointing out that checks placed in the mail on December 5 will not be considered as having paid the installment within the time allowed without penalty unless they reach the office of the tax collector before closing time at 5 o'clock.

FEW ACCIDENTS ARE REPORTED OVER WEEK END

Automobile accidents in Orange county over the week end were few, with only two reported here. A total of six persons were injured, but none were hurt seriously, reports indicate.

Three persons were hurt at 1:45 p. m. yesterday when two cars collided at Seventeenth street and the Buero road, according to a report made to the sheriff's office.

A car driven by James Price, of 612 West Eight street, collided with a machine driven by A. Gallardo, of 1921 West Third street. Mrs. Price, Price and W. W. Radcliffe, a marine attached to the U.S. S. Nevada were hurt. Price received cuts and hip. Mrs. Price was cut and bruised and Radcliffe suffered a badly cut hand. No one in the Gallardo car was reported hurt.

Three youths, all residents of Long Beach, were given first aid treatment at the Orange county hospital yesterday for injuries received when the roadster they were riding in, turned over in going around a curve near San Juan Capistrano. All were cut and bruised and they did not remain in the hospital. They are David Hughes, 17, of 1253 East Tenth street, James Patterson, 19, of 2155 East Seventeenth street, and Arthur Hills, 20, of 1247 East Tenth street.

Police News

Charged with being drunk, Alfonso Romos, and Frank Trujillo, both of Stanton, were lodged in the county jail Saturday night by sheriff's officers called to that city when it was reported the men were making a disturbance. Undersheriff C. W. Riggie and Earl Nickles, deputy, made the arrests.

GET DRIVER FOR SPEEDING; PAL FOR LOANING LICENSE

When California Highway Patrol Officers George Stinson and Ben Craig "did a U-turn" in order to catch an automobile which whizzed past them near Capistrano Beach yesterday afternoon, they expected to write only one ticket. Instead, they wrote two.

After the officers' sirens slowed down the car, the driver, one Albert Collins, of 5407 Cardin street, Los Angeles, is alleged to have "borrowed" an operator's license from a friend hiding in the rear seat and presented that to the officers.

The friend was Bud W. Pollack, also of Los Angeles. Officers learned the trick, when they noticed that the operator's card called for blue eyes for the driver when as a matter of fact he had brown eyes.

"All this speed must have had some effect on you to change the color of your eyes," Stinson said. Then the officer called for a sample of Collins' handwriting. It didn't fit the handwriting on the operator's license.

Collins got a ticket charging him with speeding 75 miles an hour.

Pollack got one for lending his operator's license to another. Both are due in Judge John Landell's court in the next five days.

VOCATIONAL BUREAU AID TO HANDICAPPED; TWO ONE-ARMED MEN RUN AUTO PAINT SHOP

What would you do if, after spending years of your life learning to become proficient at your chosen trade, you became involved in an accident or suffered some form of illness which caused you to lose the use of an arm or leg, or both, or to have one or more limbs amputated?

"I'd rather be dead," many would answer, but there are more than 20 persons in Orange county who have found they are able to engage in a remunerative occupation through special training given them by the state department of education, bureau of vocational rehabilitation, after such an experience.

Many persons with permanent physical handicaps in the state have found that they are able to learn a new trade or engage in some other form of work after their disabilities have forced them to give up their former work.

Wouldn't Quit

Did Herbert Neff, 20, Santa Ana youth, give up when he had his left arm amputated after it had been horribly mangled in a roller in a laundry? He did not, for he had a mother and father to support. He couldn't give up.

Through the efforts of R. W. Feike of the bureau of vocational rehabilitation who has charge of this territory, Neff secured employment with Frank's Auto Paint shop at 701 West Fourth street, where he has been working for the past four months.

A most unusual situation exists at the paint shop. Neff, who works for Wm. H. Pranke, has no left arm. Pranke, who runs the shop has no right arm. The two one-armed men run the shop by themselves, painting, stripping, mixing colors, spraying, sanding and doing all the necessary work to make automobiles look like new.

Several persons told Neff that it couldn't be done. He couldn't learn to be an expert automobile painter with only one arm. But he proved they were wrong. With diligent effort and application, he is now able to paint cars as well as a person with the use of both their arms.

Others Helped

Feike has been the means of helping many others in Orange county and other places. He has made arrangements for applications for the free training furnished by state and federal funds to be filed at the Citizen's Unemployment committee headquarters in the old

Willard school building on North Main street. He plans to come here every 10 days from now on.

The state department has just published a pamphlet outlining the work accomplished by the bureau and giving many instances of how aid was furnished to disabled persons.

The pamphlet declared that in 1932, 355,000 persons in the nation will become permanently disabled through accident or disease. One in every five of this number will be unable to return to their jobs or enter their chosen vocations. Public accidents lead all others, with automobile injuries increasing at the rate of 40 per cent every four years.

These disabled persons, doubly handicapped by being injured and unemployed, do not ask for charity. They ask for an opportunity for economic independence, Feike declared.

The rehabilitation service locates disabled persons, diagnoses their physical, mental and vocational resources and finds employment for them after training them.

FARM BUREAU BOARD MEETS HERE TUESDAY

Directors of the Orange County Farm Bureau will meet tomorrow for the first time since their election. This session in addition to being for the purpose of adopting a program for the year will find the members faced with three other important items of business for transaction.

Directors will be asked to approve the tentative budget prepared last week by the ways and means committee, approve appointments of standing committees, made recently by President R. J. McFadden and to receive the report of delegates to the state conference of the California Farm Bureau held in Marysville early this month.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, following the directors' session, the membership committee headed by George Kellogg, of Yorba Linda, will meet to go over its program to date and decide how to carry on its campaign during the year.

The year 1932 was the second largest in the history of foreign financing in the United States.

START DIGGING PITS AT PARK FOR BARBECUE

According to reports emanating from the headquarters of the various unemployed organizations and the American Legion posts throughout Orange county, Irvine park will be a busy place next Sunday when the Legion sponsored barbecue is held to raise funds for the purpose of purchasing foodstuffs for the unemployed of the county during the coming winter.

Chief Valdez, of the Unemployed association of Santa Ana, today has a crew of men working at the park digging the huge barbecue pit and making other preparations for putting on the largest event of its kind ever held in the county.

In addition to the barbecue itself, the committee is arranging a program of entertainment for the occasion utilizing talent of the highest order from all sections of Orange county.

All for Needy

Sponsoring this affair the American Legion wishes to emphasize the fact that every penny derived will go for the purchase of foodstuffs for needy unemployed and their families," a statement issued today said.

For those who have no means of transportation, C. H. Eccles of the Santa Ana Bus Service announces bus service to leave Fourth and Main streets, Santa Ana. This will afford opportunity for patrons to leave after attending church services and be in ample time for the barbecue and entertainments.

Ticket sales for the barbecue are in charge of the American Legion Posts throughout the county as follows:

Commander B. P. Donnelly, and Adjutant Bennie F. Edens, Capistrano Beach Post 358.

Commander Raymond Starbuck and Adj. Orrin Crooke, Fullerton Post 142; Commander Glenn D. Watkins, Laguna Beach Post No. 222; Commander E. M. Jackson and Adj. Don F. LEGISLATION ON ROADS TO BE DISCUSSED

Proposed highway legislation during the next session of the state legislature will be discussed December 15 when State Senator Nelson T. Edwards confers with the tax committee of the Orange County Farm Bureau. Nat. H. Neff, county superintendent of highways, also has been invited to attend this conference.

This will be the first meeting of the tax committee of the Farm Bureau since its appointment several weeks ago by R. J. McFadden, recently elected president of the farm group. During the meeting the committee will decide upon its program for the coming year and Chairman F. B. Browning will name the membership of sub-committees to function during the year.

The proposed highway legislation to be discussed with Senator Edwards, according to R. D. Fla-erty, secretary of the Orange County Farm Bureau, deals with the plan of adding more Southern California highways to the state's secondary system. Addition of additional mileage to the state system will relieve the counties of maintenance and place the burden upon the state.

It is expected that the tax committee will continue with the program followed last year. Last year the work was carried on through five sub-committees. One of these groups has completed its work, that of investigating the county's outstanding bonded debt, and has been discharged. The other four sub-committees will continue. Sub-committees to be appointed at the organization meeting December 15 will be on roads, schools, county government costs, and study of the state Farm Bureau tax program.

POLICE SECURE CONFESSION OF 7 BURGLARIES

Howard Pember, 25, resident of the Cliff Dwellers hotel in Long Beach, who was arrested Friday in Long Beach, suspected of burglarizing some 30 Santa Ana homes in the past several weeks, has admitted seven, and loot from these seven has been identified, the Santa Ana police department announced today.

Pember was brought here from Long Beach Saturday afternoon by Harry Fink, assistant chief, and was taken to the scene of a number of the burglaries, where he pointed out houses he entered.

Police said today that he was "holding out" on a number of other burglaries. "He is merely admitting thefts in houses where some of the loot found in his Long Beach hotel has been identified," Chief of Police Floyd W. Howard said.

Following is the list of homes which police say Pember admitted he burglarized, and in all of which some of the loot has been recovered:

P. E. Williams, 926 Hickory street, burglarized November 11, clothing worth $20 taken.

Claud Read, 417 South Broadway, burglarized November 11, clothing worth $15 taken.

Ralph Barker, 1117 Bush street, burglarized November 17, several watches worth $80 taken.

W. H. McPherson, 2035 North Broadway, burglarized November 23, clothing valued at $125 taken.

Henry B. Ortega, 507 East Beverly street, burglarized November 23, diamonds and other jewelry and clothing worth $110 taken.

Mrs. H. R. Coffey, 511 North Olive street, burglarized November 14, overcoat worth $20 stolen.

Vera McKean, of 2035 North Broadway, burglarized November 3, ring worth $80 stolen.

Police pointed out that where the articles stolen in the above listed homes had not been recovered, Pember had stated where he had sold them and that they possibly would be recovered today or tomorrow.

In the meantime, police are trying to make the prisoner confess to some 20 other burglaries committed during the same period of time as these listed and in the same manner. There also is a lot of loot in the hands of the police which had not been identified in any of the burglaries reported.

Pember will be arraigned before Justice Kenneth Morrison this afternoon on a burglary charge, police said.

WASHINGTON

JAPAN

State Secretary Stimson is playing deaf and dumb on the Japanese issue—by special request.

His personal orders have been received privately from the White House. Not one word has he uttered since publication of the Lytton report exposing the Japs as highlanders in Manchuria. His ideas are the subject of world discussion. Yet he is in the position of the boy who has spoken his piece and must sit down.

All the other government spokesmen on foreign affairs have received similar confidential instructions. On that issue the Administration is as tight as a clam.

Everyone here agrees that is a splendid idea.

Even under cover they are doing little to encourage action against Japan by the League. Last summer Stimson was secretly playing around the smaller nations. He wanted them to line up in favor of strong steps in the present League meeting. He seems to have dropped that movement entirely.

We have General McCoy sitting in on the League discussions. He keeps the Department privately informed as to what is going on. His part in the early discussions was strictly that of an onlooker.

The Department is finicky about McCoy even being in Geneva. If anyone mentions the subject Stimson always hastens to point out that McCoy is not a representative of the American government. He was selected as a private American citizen by the League to act on the Lytton Commission.

Official denials have been made about McCoy even being in Geneva. If anyone mentions the subject Stimson always hastens to point out that McCoy is not a representative of the American government. He was selected as a private American citizen by the League to act on the Lytton Commission.

There has been an uproar behind the curtain's on next year's budget.

It was changed six times within the past week—once each day. Mr. Hoover apparently is determined to go out of office with stronger efforts for economy than have been attempted here before.

He has been cuffing his Cabinet officers. Treasury experts have worn out their pencils. They have been sitting up until 1:30 a. m. these nights mulling " . . . six million . . . seven million . . ."

The result will not be sufficient even on paper to avert a tax revision.

The President has tried to keep these furtive activities under cover. He does not want the usual pressure exerted against him. If his ideas in the making got out he would have all manner of influences brought to bear.

After the six changes his plan included the following:

A three hundred million reduction in vet expenditures, eliminating disability allowances, except those traceable to war service. Consolidation of numerous government bureaus. Reduced funds for customs houses and obsolete military posts.

Continuance of the one-year Federal wage cut with some additional cuts.

The latter subject occupied much of the President's office doors when he locked his office doors and went to bat with the budget. He is known to have called on Federal Reserve officials for a detailed analysis of the costs of living. There were semi-official whispers that he was trying to work out a wage cut commensurate with reduced living costs. That may lead him later to double the 8% per cent cut enacted for this year only.

You cannot be certain of anything in the budget now until you see it. Arrangements are being made to hold it up until the last minute so that further changes can be made. It is quite possible that the program outlined above may be altered materially before the final form is sent to Congress in a few days. The talk with the President-elect may find reflections there.

NOTES

They say the airmail appropriations will avoid the pruning knife this time. The budget is supposed to provide seven millions for foreign and a hundred million for domestic which is a small increase for domestic and the same as last year for foreign.

The Herriot ministry may not last out the year. The income tax receipts may be higher than you think in March because stock market losses are not deductible this time. Treasury Secretary Mills helped put that joker in the law. Mr. Curry, Tammany leader, is not so strong with some of his boys in Congress this year.

The double licking he took on the Lehman and Walker cases has made him a less formidable master. If you have any friends among politicians ask them to tell that the Department is in communication with McCoy.

However in Geneva they know whom McCoy represents.

PRINCESS

If you have a lorgnette you can find out at the best tea tables here what is going to happen now to Princess Alice Longworth. She is going to become a working woman.

Magazines and syndicates are soliciting articles from her. Agents are trying to get her to endorse ladies' lotions and toilet articles. It seems she has suffered from the depression like everyone else.

The Princess has lately been noticed by her friends riding around town in taxicabs. She stopped in a book store the other day and let one stand outside an hour and a half.

The 20 cent cab fares in Washington are a temptation even to a Republican Princess.

Behind Mrs. Longworth's unusual activity in the Presidential campaign was good foresight for 1936. Her brother young Teddy Roosevelt will be a prominent contestant then for the Vice Presidential nomination. She has made no secret of her thoughts along this line in conversations with her friends.

The record of Theodore Junior in Porto Rico and the Philippines is very good. Men around the White House privately appraise his work very high during the past two years.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Unemployment and its relief have become of the first importance to local bankers and business men. Informed opinion figures that the next two months will bring a seasonal decline in employment which may run the number of jobless to a record total of more than twelve millions. Several financial leaders—hitherto opposed to anything resembling a dole—are now convinced that the Federal Government will have to participate vigorously in relief activities. The three hundred million dollars which Congress has already authorized the R.F.C. to loan for relief purposes will be totally inadequate.

The resources of states, municipalities and private charities are far too depleted to cope with the situation.

SHORT WEEK

The Share-the-Work movement is gaining impetus with fuller realization of the emergency. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Bankers Trust have officially adopted shorter week principles there are few business men prepared to buck the trend.

The attitude of the financial community toward work-sharing has undergone a marked change in the past month. Until then it was regarded purely as a temporary measure—perhaps necessary but a nuisance. Now its chief value is seen as a prelude to an inevitable permanent readjustment of working hours. Very few competent authorities here would still deny that the short week—shorter hours plan is coming to stay. The Tangle committee has not materially decreased the ranks of the jobless but it certainly has planted an idea effectively.

LABOR

New York is not entirely in accord with William Green's seven-point program as presented at the Federation of Labor convention at Cincinnati. The shorter week wins general approval but higher income and inheritance taxes naturally do not. Also the financial district is skeptical about unemployment insurance.

But bankers and business men are pretty unanimously agreed that it would be well to play ball with Green and his chief associates every step of the way. He is considered a vital bulwark against destructive violence. The discipline he has maintained in labor ranks is viewed as something of a miracle.

WOMEN

The American Woman's Association finds a serious problem of morale among its unemployed members. Many of them have been out of jobs for two years or more and numbers who still have jobs have suffered wage reductions which leave them barely able to feed and clothe themselves. Many have no resources to fall back on and are steadily losing hope and courage. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt—among others—is deeply concerned with this aspect of the depression.

CARTER

A group of women in New York is working on a plan to help meet the winter's emergency by creating a series of "barter colonies" among the unemployed along the lines of the experiment tried in Seattle. The idea is to establish small communities of people out of work—of various trades and professions—in various localized districts. Each member can serve his community by following his normal occupation on the basis of exchange of services to be paid for in scrip. The plan is still in a formative stage but sponsors hope to establish several barter groups in the next few months.

HARVARD

Kenneth Murdock—associated with Harvard as teacher and dean ever since his graduation—is the most likely successor to A. Lawrence Lowell as President of the University. He is in his middle thirties—about the same age as Charles W. Eliot when he took over the job. Other notable candidates have been mentioned—namely Ogden Mills and Charles F. Adams of the Hoover Cabinet. But Murdock has the inside track because of his intimate knowledge of University affairs. Lowell's pet was a child—the House Plan modeled on the system of independent colleges in the English universities—is now in operation and working well. Murdock knows what it is all about.

PROBLEM

Some of the Westinghouse common stock owners have let it be known that they will consider it an act of war if any Radio Corporation stock is handed over to preferred stockholders without a reduction in the preferred equity. Preferred stockholders are claiming prior rights in any distribution of company assets. The management is between the frying pan and the fire. It looks like a good winter for lawyers.

RETURNED TO JAIL

Wanted here on a charge of failure to stop and render aid, Stephen Poras, former school janitor in Santa Ana, arrested Friday in San Diego, was returned to the Orange county jail late Saturday. The man is said to have run away from an accident in which the car he was driving, collided with another several months ago at Seventeenth street and Broadway. He has not been arraigned.

WILL SHOW NEW BUICK MODELS HERE DEC. 3

"When will the new 1933 Buicks be shown?" This question, asked thousands of times of Buick dealers in the last month, now is definitely answered. Saturday, December 3 is the date for the first display of the new models that already have created such interest.

The introduction of the new Buick models is one of the big events each year on the automobile calendar, with crowds thronging the showrooms of Buick dealers throughout the country.

"With the presentation of the 1933 Buick only ten days away we look forward to the new season with confidence that the new models will be the most popular in all Buick history," said W. R. Gordon, manager Reid Motor company, Buick dealers. "We know enough about these cars, following months of testing at the General Motors proving grounds, to know that Buick will fulfill generously its famous slogan regarding 'better automobiles'."

"Certainly the automobile industry faces a brighter situation than it did a year ago. Necessity of replacement of old cars will be a stimulant in itself but a still stronger factor will be the appeal of the new models. Buick engineers have taken a great stride forward."

"We already are taking orders for 1933 Buicks, showing a quickening buying desire. As has been the custom in former years, delivery of new cars will be made in accordance with the priority of orders. The fairness of this and the advantages of early orders are obvious."

"The faith that the public holds in Buick is shown by the large amount of advance purchasing. Buick records show, holds the highest percentage of repeat purchases from owners. Each year this ratio increases to further strengthen Buick's position at the top of sales in its price division."

Young Foresters Make Field Trip

Led by their newly elected officers, boys of the Santa Ana chapter of Young Foresters made a trip Friday to Armstrong's nursery in Ontario. Two carloads of boys made the trip.

Election of officers was held earlier in the week, with members naming Harry Reede as president; Monte Bauer, secretary-treasurer and Donald Knaack, reporter. B. W. Osterman is leader of the group, and Eric Eastman of the Orange County Farm Bureau, adviser.

The aim of the organization is to be of assistance to foresters and each member works out an individual project. Boys from all over the county hold membership in the Santa Ana chapter.

Fruit Cakes To Be Featured At Cooking School

Holiday fruit cakes will be discussed and a demonstration of how to make them will be given at the Southern Counties Gas company cooking school which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the gas company auditorium on West Second street.

"While the idea of fruit cakes is a time-honored and ancient custom, there will be new suggestions presented on baking and decorating the cakes," Margaret Stroun, popular class director, said today.

"Current cake, dark fruit cake and wonder fruit cake are to be baked. At the end of the school these articles will be wrapped to suggest ways of sending them as gifts," she said.

TWO BUILDERS SERMON TOPIC FOR MINISTER

Contrasting the right and wrong ways of building character as well as homes, the Rev. Walter S. Buchanan, pastor of the First Christian church, preached yesterday morning on the subject "The Two Builders."

His text was Jesus' words at the close of the Sermon on the Mount in which the parable was told of the man who built a house on the rock where it withstood the rain and storms as contrasted to the house built by another man on the sand, where it crashed and was wrecked under the stress of the storm.

"Christ's words are imperishable," the pastor said in beginning his sermon. "They are precious as well. The people to whom He talked marvelled at His words. When we are reading the word of God, He is speaking to us. Not all words in the Bible are from God, some are from Satan and some are from man. But when God speaks we should be reverent and listen."

"Jesus placed people in two classes—those who built safely and carefully—the wise and the foolish—those who were with God or against Him."

"We are either building character or tearing it down. Jesus wants us to build it on the rock so that it will last for eternity. Don't put shoddy material into your character, your prayers or your home, for when the test comes, and it will surely come, they will crash about you. Build safely on the rock and then you will be able to face any trouble that comes."

News Of The Churches

FOURTH TALK IN GROUP ON REVELATIONS

Taking the fourth chapter of Revelations as the basis for his sermon yesterday, the Rev. Fred A. Flora, pastor of the First Church of the Brethren, delivered the fourth of a series of lectures on the Book of Revelations.

In his sermon he said in part: "In the second and third chapters of the book we have the messages to the seven churches and we have no more concerning the church until in the nineteenth chapter where we have the church in the glory. In the meantime the book deals with things transpiring both in heaven and upon earth but all of it having to do more or less with the earth."

"Since the church seems to end at the close of the third chapter we see, in the beginning of the fourth, the point at which the church is taken out of the world to be with the Lord in heaven as He declares in 1 Thess. 4:14-15 and 'so shall we ever be with the Lord.'"

"When John was taken up into heaven he saw a throne and God sitting upon it and around the throne were 24 other 'seats' or thrones and as many 'elders' sitting upon them. As an 'elder' in Scripture is a representative of a family or tribe, so it seems here these represent the saved of earth being divided into two groups of 12 representing on the one hand the 12 tribes of Israel as indicated in Rev. 21:12, and on the other the church as also indicated in Rev. 21:14.

"There are four 'beasts' or 'living creatures' before the throne which seem to be identical with Cherubim as mentioned elsewhere in scripture, two of them were placed at the east of the Garden of Eden to keep the way of the Tree of Life and later over the Mercy seat of the Ark of the Covenant, seemingly in each instance they had to do with guarding the holiness of God from the intrusion of that which would defile."

"In this chapter of Revelation they were crying, 'Holy, holy, holy.' When the living creatures gave glory to God, the elders fell down before Him and ascribe praise and honor, casting down their golden crowns before Him. The center of their praise seems to be the fact that He is the creator, later we have them singing His praise for His redemptive work."

NOTED SPEAKER OUTLINES REQUIREMENTS FOR DOING A JOB IN SUCCESSFUL WAY

"When Christ came to this earth He was not seeking a throne. He was seeking a job." This was the message brought to the people of Santa Ana last night by Dr. Elmer E. Helms who spoke at the First Methodist church.

Dr. Helms talked last night particularly to men and young people on the subject "Our Job." At the morning service of the church he was the speaker and talked on "The Amazing Story of a Book." Dr. Helms, one of the outstanding ministers of the Methodist church, is a writer and lecturer, will be in Santa Ana for the entire week and will conduct services at the First Methodist church each evening. Tonight he will deliver his message on "A Visit to the Isle of Patmos—Personally Conducted."

Speaking last night on "Our Job," he said in part:

Jesus Was Servant
"Jesus Christ came to this world as the universal servant of the people. He did not come as a king, but as a servant; 'I must be about My Father's business,' he said. He did not come carrying a scepter. He came seeking a job. Every Christian is a job hunter. To successfully do the job that awaits every Christian, according to Dr. Helms, there are five service requirements which he described as the 'five L's.' He listed them as Loyalty service, Living service, Loving service, Little service, and Lasting service."

Describing Loyalty service Dr. Helms said that one must have loyalty to the job before expecting to successfully do it. "Do or die," he said, "is the spirit with which a Christian must face his task. Die, if necessary, but the important thing is to do the job."

Call to Battle
He told how in the days of the ancient Scottish clans, the call to battle for the right was a cross dipped in blood and carried through the streets. "Christ," he declared, "carried His own cross, dipped in blood, calling us to fight for the right. Christ saved the world from the cross and we are trying to save it from a cross—and that is one of the things wrong with the world today."

"To successfully do our job we must have a motive and that is where the second L comes in. This is Loving service. To be successful one must love the job more than the pay. It is fun to do the job you love or to sacrifice for people you love. The necessary in succeeding on the job, he declared, is Living service. "Every church, of every faith," he said, "has its congregation divided into two classes—members who are on the roll and members who are on the job. Selfishness is suicide. We must give if we are to receive."

"The Lake of Galilee and the Dead Sea are both fed from the same stream, the Jordan river, yet the lake is a thing of beauty and filled with fish while the sea is dead. Both bodies of water are fed by the same stream, yet one is alive because it gives, while the other closes in upon itself."

Can Do Great Things
"The fourth type of service is Little service, doing the little things. The world is dying for want of a little labor. It is little labor to have a boy, or a girl, or a man, or a woman. The world is dying for want of people to do things. Your little service and my little service can accomplish great things. You can't do it alone, and I can't do it alone but working together we can accomplish great things on our job as Christians."

The last type of service necessary is Lasting service. Every pastor has three divisions in his congregation: the workers, shirkers and jerkers or those who count off, and those he can count on and off.

"Our trouble is that we get so stirred upon occasions but we quit so easily." Illustrating his point he told the story of David who did not become discouraged but sought election as premier of England five times and was defeated. The sixth time he sought election he succeeded. He closed by saying "It is not what we bring to the task in our hands but what we bring in our hearts that counts."

Christian Science

The lesson-sermon yesterday at the Santa Ana First Church of Christ, Scientist, denounced ancient and modern necromancy, alias mesmerism and hypnotism.

One of the Bible selections included Jesus' words: "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have we cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, stated: "Willing the sick to recover is not the metaphysical practice of Christian Science, but is sheer animal magnetism, truth, and not cord-magnet will, is the divine power which says to disease, 'Peace, be still.'"

ward political independence in a consensus compiled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to which are added:

"Anti-white" policy of the Hoover administration and especially the nomination of Judge John H. Parker to the U. S. supreme court.

Jim-Crowing of colored gold star mothers on the pilgrimage to graves in France; distribution of the negro regiments in the army to service detachments; failure to appoint negroes to public office; general indifference of the Hoover administration to the negro."

MANY ATTEND CATHOLIC MEET AT FULLERTON

A large attendance marked the semi annual Orange county convention of the Holy Name society at St. Mary's parish hall and church in Fullerton yesterday, where the Very Reverend M. O'Gorman of Los Angeles director of the society, was the celebrant.

The Rev. Father O'Gorman talked on the need of zeal and example in keeping this country free for worship, and warned that promoting reverence for the sacred name of God is essential.

Another speaker of note was P. T. O'Neill, Los Angeles pioneer, first president of the state Holy Name society, who told something of the early days of California.

Daniel E. O'Brien, Los Angeles attorney, another active leader in the Holy Name society of Southern California, told of the founding of the missions in California.

The Rev. Father Mortimer Murphy of St. Mary's parish presented an address of welcome, to which George Ravenkamp, Santa Ana, master of ceremonies, and district chairman of the Holy Name society, responded.

After presentation of the Huntington Beach Boy Scout troop, under direction of Father P. H. Genest, and singing of the national anthem, the guests adjourned from St. Mary's hall to the church, where solemn benediction and most blessed sacrament were observed.

Parishes and priests participating were Fullerton, the Rev. Father Murphy, priest; Santa Ana parish, and the Rev. F. A. Wekeman; Anaheim, and the Rev. P. Browne; and the Rev. E. Hanlon; Orange, and the Rev. E. Riordan; Huntington Beach, and the Rev. Louis P. Genest; Newport Beach and Balboa and the Rev. B. J. Beary, and Laguna Beach, and the Rev. T. J. Lehane.

SLIDES Mills, Foster Ready For Delhi 'Grudge Go'

by WILLIAM BRAUCHER

BABA GOES A-HUNTING

The same remarkable feat of aiming that made him the home king of his baseball days gives Babe Ruth prestige in any hunting party. Shooting from the left shoulder, Babe is one of the most formidable marksmen you could care to watch.

Connecticut operatives relate interesting incidents of a recent expedition in which Babe turned out to be the hero. Babe was guest of the late Mr. L. B. Beck of Wilton, Conn., chairman of the state game and fisheries commission.

The Babe began with this apology: "This is my first time hunting this season, and maybe I won't be so hot."

There were four or five others in the party. Just after the start had been made, at Ridgebury, which is just west of Waterbury, a rabbit came tearing along.

Babe waits and hits. All hands let go, but the Babe waited. All missed, except your friend, Mr. Ruth, who brought down the bunny with a perfect shot.

A short time later, another bunny came bounding along. Again all hands pumped away at the little slippers. But the Babe waited. After they all had missed, again he stopped the rabbit with a perfect shot.

The big fellow trudged along through the swampy going, toting his load of game which grew heavier and heavier as the expedition continued. The Babe was saying the price of his skill, and none in slippers underfoot went into water up to his knees.

TOO MUCH FREIGHT. "I'm not going to shoot any more until we get back near the house," he finally announced. "Packing these rabbits isn't so much fun as it looks."

One more shot would bring his legal limit of three, but he refused to let go until almost in sight of the farmhouse. Another rabbit came sprinting past. The Babe let go with a single shot, but the smaller rabbit had taken their shots. And when he fired, down came the rabbit.

KNOCKS OFF PHEASANTS. The Babe was tickled with his new gun, but claimed a better kick out of the long-range shooting at pheasants, which fly like a wild in Connecticut.

One of the dogs routed a pheasant within Ruth's range. He pulled up rather quickly and missed. The dog barked and the bird was so high, he took aim once more.

When the distance was paced, it was estimated that Babe had saved his hit at about 70 yards. The shooting!

Later, at close range, he brought down his second pheasant, shooting the only woodcock seen all day.

That night the Babe rabbits and pheasants and the game bagged by the other members of the party were served at dinner at Tom's in New York. There also were venison, duck and coon.

The gamekeeping and timing of the game during the hunt were no better than his abilities with knife and fork. The Bambino not only can shoot, but eat.

GAELS, GEORGIA ON TROY '33 SCHEDULE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—(UP)—A tough 1933 football schedule, which breaks away fast, without any early-season trial horses, has been completed by the University of Southern California.

The Trojans open September 30 against Loyola of Los Angeles. Tom Lieb's fighting team that held them their year to a 6-0 victory, then take on Washington State and St. Mary's, which split the 14-7 last year. Georgia appears here December 2.

The schedule: September 30—Loyola, October 7—Washington State, October 14—St. Mary's, October 21—Oregon State at Portland, October 28—California at Berkeley, November 4—Open, November 11—Stanford at the Rose Bowl, Pasadena, November 18—Oregon, November 25—Notre Dame at South Bend, December 2—University of Georgia, December 9—Washington.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Speed, strength and savvy—the three S's that make for football greatness—are assured in the 1932 All-America announced by the United Press today.

A survey which covered all the national football games from Maine to Washington and from California to Florida, and which overlooked not one of the thousands of players who wore the colors of hundreds of colleges, produced the following variety eleven:

FISTIC RIVALS END TRAINING, CLAIM VICTORY

Nat Mills and Neil Foster, 130-pound lightweight, completed training today for their "natural" at Sam Sampson's Orange County Athletic club at Delhi tomorrow night. Expressions of confidence were issued from both camps.

Scheduled for three rounds, the Mills-Foster "grudge" bout has attracted more attention than any other amateur program he has ever promoted, according to Matchmaker Kid Mexico.

Mills and Foster already have had one set-to but it was an underdogged one that focused considerable attention on their forthcoming engagement.

After Announcer Way Middough introduced the fighters before last week's main event, Mills crossed the ring to shake hands with Foster who gruffly refused and pushed him away. The ill-tempered Irvine ranchhand countered with a stiff right to the face and before the house staff realized what was happening, Mills and Foster were engaged in genuine fistfights. Referee, seconds and even Kid Mexico had difficulty separating the hot-headed participants.

Mills and Foster head the usual quota of 10 three-round contests. Tony Lee and Reggie Kerr, 155-pound middleweights, collide in the semi, and Doyle Richards goes against Benny Gomez in an all-out special event.

Baby Sal Solis, Jess Sanchez, Raoul Solis, Paul Brown, Manuel Cruz, Rap Lopez and Ray Torres are among local boxers on the card.

JONES DENIES HE'LL COACH AT STANFORD

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—(UP)—"On my word of honor," "Last thing that entered my mind," and "incongruous gossip," were some of the phrases Coach Howard Jones used today in spilling local rumors that he was considering deserting the Southern California football team to relieve "Pop" Warner at Stanford.

"I don't know how these stories are given circulation," Jones declared. "The idea of my taking Pop's job is the last thing that has ever entered my mind."

He pointed out that his own contract with Southern California runs through the season of 1934.

Speaking of the forthcoming Notre Dame game, the Trojan mentor spoke with characteristic gloom about Troy's prospects.

"I don't think that our backfield compares with theirs," he said. "I should say that Griffith and Warburton stack up with any of the best in the country. I can't use them in the game together under our system. If it was a matter of using our backfield 60 minutes of the game against their backs on the same basis, I should say they were no better than ours, but inasmuch as we must manipulate for power, they exceed us in strength."

He may encase us December 10, but we'll give 'em the best we've got."

J. S. Fluor and S. C. Russell today followed L. W. Bents into Santa Ana Country club golf championships, completing the organizations major tournament season for 1932.

Fluor defeated H. Weinigard, 2 and 1, in the first final, Russell eliminated J. H. Estes, 1 up on the second hole, for first place in the second flight.

Montgomery On All-Star Prep Squad

Major recognition as an outstanding interscholastic football player today was accorded Floyd Montgomery, Santa Ana halfback, and Morris Bergman, Brea-Olinda tackle and captain.

These two Orange county players were selected on an All-Southern California eleven which Irving Eckhoff, Los Angeles Times sports writer, announced yesterday.

Other first stringers: Clarke, Hollywood, and Ward, Redondo Beach, ends; McMoore, Los Angeles, tackle; Braden, Fremont and Sweet, Woodrow Wilson, guards; Collier, Alhambra, center; Pollock, San Diego, quarter; Alanko, Lincoln, halfback, and Keller, Inglewood, fullback.

Captain "Red" Kidder, Francis Conrad and Art Stranske, Santa Ana backs, received honorable mention.

S. A. HALFBACK LEADS SCORERS OF CONFERENCE

Averaging a touchdown a game, Floyd Montgomery, premier Santa Ana halfback, led the Coast Preparatory league in scoring for the 1932 season.

Montgomery made five touchdowns for a seasonal total of 39 points, six more than were credited to "Mushy" Pollock, San Diego's quarterback.

Floyd Montgomery Ned Bartlett, Glendale, and Howard Haradon, Pasadena, were third with 19 points. Haradon's record is impressive because he missed two of Pasadena's conference games.

SAINTS COMPLETE SECOND YEAR IN CONFERENCE UNDEFEATED BY OVERWHELMING GLENDALE, 39-6

Santa Ana high school looked back today on a football record perhaps unequalled in the annals of Southern California interscholastic sports.

By overwhelming Glendale, 39-6, Coach "Tex" Oliver's champions Saturday completed their second successive conference schedule undefeated and with a remarkably sustained run of 23 victories and one since they were last defeated—on November 15, 1930.

Glendale, a sizeable team composed of many veterans which had given other schools in the Coast league some trouble, was helpless in front of the spirited attack of Santa Ana's well trained soldiers.

Score Thrice in First Quarter

The Saints scored three times in the first quarter, once in the second and twice in the third to manufacture their biggest point-total of the season. Three of Oliver's best men, Francis Conrad, Harold Youel and Bob Mitchell, did not play at all on account of recent injuries, but an even 40 Saint players saw service.

Glendale's touchdown, the second Santa Ana has permitted a conference opponent this season, was the product of an 88-yard run by fast halfback Ned Bartlett in the first quarter.

After the touchdown, the Saints composed almost exclusively of Saint third-stringers. Oliver's first and second team players dominated the situation throughout.

A well conceived and executed passing attack gave the champions three of their six touchdowns which were made by and as follows:

(1) Floyd Montgomery, right halfback, who ran 13 yards off his left tackle on a reverse in the first few minutes of play to climax a drive for midfield. Jack Mitchell's try for the extra point was blocked by Kyle Glendale end.

Saint Passes Click

(2) Jack Mitchell, right end, who caught a pass from Montgomery on the 12-yard line. There was an element of luck in this touchdown as the pass tipped from the extend of fingers of End Clarence Bolton off those of Glendale's End Hanky into the paws of Mitchell.

S. A. HALFBACK LEADS SCORERS OF CONFERENCE

JAYSEE BASKET PLAYERS BEGIN TRAINING SOON

Just as encouraging as last season, when Coach Bill Foote's Dons tied for the Orange Empire conference championship, Santa Ana junior college's 1932-33 basketball candidates this week begin a month of training which calls for practice games with Compton and Long Beach colleges before the conference season opens early in January.

Santa Ana tied Chaffey, Riverside, Pomona and Fullerton for the conference title in February, and Chaffey's Panthers won out in an elimination series for the championship.

The Dons play Compton during the first week of December in a practice game here, travel to Long Beach December 16 to face Coach Mel Griffin's Vikings.

Jack Stewart and Palmer Stoddard, transfers from Phoenix, Ariz.; Harold Welty, Orange H. guard; "Red" McDaniels, transfer from Stanford; Jim Lash, Free Press, Bell, "Tex" Harris and Alex Clark, former Santa Ana H. players, are the most promising of Santa Ana's new talent. McDaniels, Lash, Bell and Harris are now out for football. Welty is recovering from a serious knee injury received in football, but it is believed he will be ready for basketball before January.

Veterans returning from the 1931-32 squad are "Hen" Thierly, forward; Jimmy Hall, guard; Fred Brooks, center and forward; Harold Spangler, forward; Hideo Higashi, forward and guard; Mike Santa Cruz, guards; "Gib" Meisinger, guard; and Earl Homan, guard.

Claude Williams, Ray Hoar and Charles Bowden, now out for football, are other prospects. Melvin Wiseman, star guard for M. E. South, Santa Ana Church league, may report.

Several other candidates are expected from the Orange county high school graduates who entered Jaysee in September.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—(UP)—The new Notre Dame offensive, which Anderson declared was devised last spring is based on a longer count after the shift and use of a backfield man in motion.

ANAHEIM, BREA-OLINDA CLASH TOMORROW

Anaheim and Brea-Olinda high schools collide at neutral Fullerton tomorrow for the football championship of the Orange league. The teams tied for first place at the end of the regular season.

Game-time is 2:45.

To the winner not only will go the seasonal spoils but also the right of facing Herbert Hoover H. at San Diego Saturday in a playoff game for the Southern California prep championship.

Anaheim, winner over "Shorty" Smith's crew by two touchdowns during regular conference play, has been made a slight favorite although experts concede that Brea-Olinda has improved considerably since falling before the Colists early in the campaign, 12-0.

Record of league games:

Anaheim 6, Orange 0. Anaheim 12, Brea-Olinda 0. Anaheim 13, Huntington Beach 0. Anaheim 20, Newport Harbor 0. Anaheim 0, Garden Grove 7.

Brea-Olinda 25, Newport Harbor 0. Brea-Olinda 0, Anaheim 12. Brea-Olinda 12, Huntington Beach 2. Brea-Olinda 7, Orange 0.

Brea-Olinda has a heavy team with several outstanding stars, notably Captain Morris Bergman, 180-pound tackle; "Rusty" Ledbetter, 190-pound fullback, and Clayton, a fine blocking back.

Anaheim's ace is Danny Smith and Foster Cheatham, sliver backs and Brown and H. Davis, strong tackles.

Injured Don Players Set For Vikings

Barring injuries in practice this week, Coach Bill Foote's Santa Ana junior collegians will be in first-class condition for their charity football game with Coach Oak Smith's Long Beach junior college Vikings in Municipal Bowl Friday night.

Officials of the Unemployed Association of Santa Ana, Inc., are handling all arrangements for the benefit, and are anticipating the largest football crowd ever to witness a game in Santa Ana. Gate receipts will be used in relief work among the community's unemployed this winter.

Captain Jack Fredericks, guard and halfback; Hideo Higashi, right halfback; and Claude Williams, running guard, all temporarily injured, are expected to be ready for Long Beach, and other Don candidates with minor ailments should be in condition, too. Rib injuries are still bothering Fredericks. Higashi, in an attempt to catch a long pass against Fullerton, collided with several opponents and injured his knee and leg. Williams is nursing a "trick" knee.

That leaves only Whittier and Inglewood for Santa Ana to face, and the situation does not meet with favor at any of the three schools. The "Big Three" feel that the C. I. F. should arrange its own playoff schedule instead of allowing the smaller schools to do it for themselves, and to "seed" the teams with the most impressive records instead of pairing them in early rounds so they'll eliminate each other.

When Santa Ana officials communicated with Whittier spokesmen today, the Poets preferred to put the issue squarely up to Van Patten rather than arbitrarily schedule Santa Ana.

SANTA ANA 5-1 BASEBALL PREY OF FIRESTONES

Wilbur Peters, former Los Angeles Angel southpaw, extended the losing streak of Santa Ana's Hancock Oilers to four straight here yesterday when he pitched Firestone Tires to a 5-1 victory over the Santa Ana Southern California league entry.

Allowing only six hits which he kept well scattered, Peters blanked the Oilers in every inning except the second when Fritz Gunther's single and Terry Griffith's double gave the Santa Anas a 1-0 lead.

Firestone Tires wiped this out in the fourth and took a commanding lead in the fifth on a single, three errors and a sacrifice.

The Los Angeles club added two more in the ninth on a single and two doubles.

Late News From Orange County Communities

Coast Sections Join In Plan For Christmas Lights

TREE PLANTING PROJECT GIVEN GROUP BACKING

THREE ARCH BAY, Nov. 28.—Residents of the newly organized South Coast Water district, comprising the towns of Aliso Beach, Coast Royal, Three Arches and Three Arch Bay, will join with the other communities of the Orange county coast line in helping to light up Coast highway from Seal Beach to San Clemente with Christmas lights this year.

At the meeting of the South Coast Improvement association held Saturday night at the Hi-Hi tavern, Three Arch Bay, a committee was named to bring about this co-operation. The committee is composed of Elmer L. Crawford, chairman, Hallam Cooley and Miss Edith Johnson.

The association voted to take out a full membership in the Orange County Coast association and named two representatives, C. E. C. Burnett, secretary, and Capt. George A. Fortis, treasurer.

After the organization had voted to join the Laguna Beach Chamber of Commerce, Elmer L. Crawford was named as delegate.

Seventy-five residents of the water district and guests enjoyed a turkey dinner. Membership in the association now numbers more than half of the permanent residents and a drive will be made, it was announced by President E. M. Seefeld, to have a 100 per cent membership.

Through Miss Edith Johnson, who was a member of a similar committee in the Three Arches Home Owners' association, a movement was started for the naming of the streets in the entire district so that they will not conflict. The matter was referred to President Seefeld by the roads and parks committee with the suggestion that the members of the former committee in Three Arches be consulted.

Crawford, chairman of the roads and parks committee, reported that S. V. Cortelyou, division engineer for the state highway commission, twice had visited the district on the invitation of the committee, which had been instructed at the October meeting to investigate this possibility.

As the result of a result of the widening and paving contract on the state highway, it was definitely determined that it will not be possible to open up Sixth, Seventh and Eleventh avenues. Sixth avenue is in a ravine and never has been opened. Seventh avenue would have an $3 per cent grade and Eleventh avenue a 40 per cent grade and never has been opened. Fourth avenue will be opened by making a fill. Captain Fortis has promised to supply the rock needed for a fill to open up Fifth avenue, and the state has promised the dirt to complete the road. Crawford reported fine co-operation by the state highway authorities.

As the result of a talk at the last meeting by Dr. Thomas Spencer Miller of the Laguna Beach Garden club, a special committee was named to carry out a plan for tree-planting throughout the district. W. C. Watkins was named as chairman and associated with him will be Charles Bent, Miss Jean Johnson, Mrs. George Portus, Mrs. Nellie Strong, Mrs. C. G. Huston, of Costa Mesa, gave an explanatory talk on the Christmas lighting plan of the Orange County Coast association. He said the movement was not merely to attract thousands of people to Orange county to witness a unique spectacle, but to witness a genuine Christmas spirit.

He suggested that the lighting be started the 15th or 18th of December and be continued until after New Year's day. He asked that all citizens co-operate, if only to the extent of a wreath and a light in a window. He informed the meeting that the Huntington Beach oil derricks will be lighted with colored lights and that many of the gasoline stations have promised to co-operate with the plan.

Harry Welch, secretary of the coast-wide body, made a brief talk, in which he declared that the co-operation of various groups along the coast line had made the coast highway possible and it now is the aim of the association to beautify it so that eventually it will be known throughout the world.

Summer Crosby, Laguna Beach editor, told of the plan presented by Joseph R. Jahraus, of Laguna Beach, at the last meeting of the coast body, calling for the construction of a Christmas shrine by each community. He spoke of plans for the Christmas season in Laguna Beach which will start December 9 with an "Out of the Trenches" dinner at the White House cafe, which will be a feast of fun at which the swan song of "Old Man Depression" will be sung. Laguna Beach will co-operate with the Christmas lighting and shine plan and Wayne Moore will produce a Christmas play at the Caballero ballroom, using "The Other Wise Men," by Dr. Henry Van Dyke, for his vehicle. There will be an entertainment lasting an hour and a half at which Christmas carols will be sung and for which a very small admission will be charged to cover cost of production. The festivities will close with a celebration January 17, in honor of the completed highway from Seal Beach to San Clemente. This will be marked by a pageant and a dinner in the evening at Travaglini's cafe to which many celebrities will be invited.

MISS GUNTHER, E. C. SAUMS WED IN FULLER PARK

FULLER PARK, Nov. 28.—With a beautiful setting of palms and poinsettias in the garden of the A. L. Cook home on Olive street in Fuller Park, a quiet wedding took place Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, uniting in marriage Mildred L. Gunther and Elmer C. Saums.

The single ring ceremony was used, with the Rev. E. Dow Hoffman, pastor of the Fullerton Methodist Episcopal church, officiating. Preceding the ceremony, A. L. Cook sang "I Love You Truly" and the wedding march was played by Mrs. P. N. Chapin.

The bride was given in marriage by William Gibb and was lovely in a floor-length gown of white satin fashioned with a jacket made with short puffed sleeves.

A soft bow of the same material hung from the waist line on the left side. Her veil, of lace and tulle, caught by sprays of orange blossoms, formed a tiny cap and long train. Her shower bouquet was of pale pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Little Mildred, dressed in green pastel taffeta, carried the train. Mrs. A. L. Cook, sister of the bridegroom, assisted as matron of honor, in an ankle-length dress of yellow georgette with short ruffled jacket, and carried a bouquet of orchid sweet peas and smilax, with yellow and orchid ribbon streamers. A. L. Cook attended the groom.

Following the ceremony, refreshments of ice cream, cake and fruit punch were served by Mrs. Charles De Welt and Mrs. A. W. Eberhard. The bride's cake, a large fruit cake decorated with white icing, was made by Mrs. William Saums.

Mrs. Saums was formerly of Franklin Park, New Jersey, and the marriage is the culmination of a romance which began four years ago, when Mr. Saums was stationed on the east coast.

Mr. Saums attended high school in Loveland, Colo., and entered the navy in 1916. He now holds the position of chief radio man on the U. S. S. Louisville stationed at San Pedro, where the newly wedded pair will make their home temporarily.

GROWERS READY TO FIGHT OFF FROST ATTACKS

Orange county citrus growers are prepared to battle Jack Frost every inch of the way during any cold snaps which may descend on sunny Southern California and Orange county in the near future.

The Tustin Frost Protection League is one of the outstanding organizations which has swung into operation again this year, following the same tactic that have been used since the league was organized seven years ago by Ross A. Shafer, prominent Tustin rancher who is president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Orange county.

Seven years ago Shafer conceived the idea of citrus growers banding together in a protective league to fight the frost menace. Intricate systems of alarms have been set up which preclude the hazard of frost damage to fruit without adequate protection measures being taken.

Buy Oil at Cost

Through the organization, oil which is used in the orchard heaters which cover the acres of oranges with a blanket of warmth during danger periods, can be purchased by members at cost.

The alarm and patrol service which has just been put into operation this year, will continue until around March 1, when the frost danger is over.

If the mercury in the three thermometers which are placed at advantageous locations in the Tustin area drops to 29 degrees, the fire alarm in Tustin is sounded and the siren screeches out warning to all citrus ranchers that they must fire their heaters. In addition to the blowing of the siren, members are assured of receiving the frost warning through a system of telephone calls. Key men are notified who in turn call growers in their neighborhood.

Automatic Alarms

Automatic electric alarms are also used as well as two government temperature stations. All grower-members can be notified of the frost danger within 10 or 15 minutes after the temperature has dropped to dangerous levels. During cold nights riders are employed to check the temperature stations every 30 minutes.

Through the organization of the league growers are assured of having ample time to protect their fruit. Even if the temperature has dropped to 29 degrees before the growers are notified, the fruit will not reach that temperature for some time. It requires nearly an hour for the fruit to reach the same temperature as the air temperature.

In addition to the protective measures, the league constantly keeps in touch with weather conditions and forecasts and attempts to keep the smudge nuisance at a minimum. There are 500 acres of citrus fruits which are protected by means of the league operations.

There are other frost organizations in Orange county, but none as complete and efficient as the Tustin protective league. It is said.

THIS DEMOCRATIC ROOSEVELT

Being the Life Story of President-Elect Frank Delano Roosevelt
By
Leland M. Ross and Allan W. Grobin

(This intimate story of the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, beginning with the time his father took him as a 5-year-old boy to call on his close friend, Grover Cleveland, then President of the United States, carries the reader through an interesting boyhood at Hyde Park, N. Y., his student days at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School, and the development of his political career, which began with a New York State Senate seat in 1910, and culminated in his election as President of the United States in 1932. This biography is entirely authentic. The preceding installment told how F. D., while Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1918, refused to run for Governor of New York because he considered it his duty to go to Europe for a tour of inspection of the Western front. Asked whom he would suggest as the candidate, he said Alfred E. Smith was the man to lead the New York Democrats to victory.)

INSTALLMENT TWELVE

Meanwhile Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt went abroad on the destroyer. While he was on the European front, the New York Democrats, convening at Saratoga, selected Alfred E. Smith as their nominee for governor.

And F. D.'s candidate went into the race with Governor Charles S. Whitman, reinforced by unqualified endorsements from President Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The election proved to be a most interesting one. Running as it did through the closing year of the war, with Catholics, Jews and Protestants, men of every creed and race all on the firing line in France, the Republicans did not dare bring up religion as a political consideration. Smith's Catholicism was kept entirely out of the contest. Roosevelt imported more Wilson influence; and the impending attack upon the national administration took its first definite form in that battle.

"We in Washington," said F. D., "need a governor in Albany who will not think of his own selfish interests first but will work wholeheartedly with the entire nation in the great tasks that are still before us. The voters of up-state will join with every borough of greater New York in giving Alfred E. Smith the splendid majority he so well deserves, both as a man and as a devoted public servant."

When the ballots were counted in November, Sheriff Smith had beaten Governor Whitman by a narrow margin.

And Franklin D. Roosevelt had added another role to his already prolific repertoire . . . that of political god-father. It is interesting to imagine what would have happened had Roosevelt himself been the candidate or had he refrained from pushing Smith forward in his place. Considering the narrow margin of the Democratic victory, it is only reasonable to conclude that without the aid which he and Wilson gave, "Al" would have been defeated.

... In January, 1919, with the world conflict terminated, the United States navy along with other departments was confronted by the huge task of undoing what in war had been done. The officials gathered to consider ways and means.

The question resolved itself promptly into how the Navy's huge plant and equipment in Europe should be demobilized. It was decided to send Roosevelt. He sailed on the transport George Washington for Brest, Jan. 1, 1919.

In Europe a gigantic task awaited him. There were forty or fifty foreign shore stations to be closed, a large number of damage claims to be adjudicated, scores of huge navy contracts to be settled. Millions of dollars in naval property to be sorted, and that not worth shipping home to be sold abroad.

F. D. brushed aside red tape. Every base became a "closing-out" scene; materials unsuitable for shipment were speedily disposed of; equipment which America could utilize was stowed aboard transports and dispatched to New York. Damage claims were settled promptly with fair consideration of Uncle Sam's rights and international good will. The approval of European officials was again earned. The fact that F. D. spoke French and German helped him much.

He finished the entire job in two months and was back in America in the fore part of March. Promptly he began a campaign in this country to make forever impossible the recurrence of such costly unpreparedness as had preceded the 1918 crisis.

At Rochester, New York, October 11, 1919, he declared in an address before the state convention of the American Legion that some form of universal training was essential for both the Army and the Navy. Disclaiming that he was presenting anyone's views save his own, he advocated a naval reserve of 150,000 men in addition to the regular navy as a first line of defense. The reserves were to be under call to report for duty on twenty-four hours' notice and would have definite posts on ships or at shore stations. In addition he urged a second line of defense made up of men who had had some naval experience. He declared that the conditions prior to America's entry into the war were "perfectly ridiculous."

Acting upon his own words, he plunged into work on development of radio-equipped seaplanes and assisted the 1919 attempts at transatlantic flights. At that time no seaplane had flown across the Atlantic. Commander Richard E. Byrd, who had returned from retirement for war service, conceived the idea of having the navy

RALLY AID FOR HOMELESS

Call Nation To Rescue Of Refugees

Typical of the migrant families that struggle over the United States these days are the groups pictured here: Left, a mother and her children find an abandoned shack for a temporary abode. Right, an energetic mother serves the family stew in a crude shelter. Below, a homeless Southern family camps out in the open.

frontier to take up the drift! "Often in losing their place of legal residence, they have forfeited their claim to state aid. They are citizens without a country!"

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. — The pitiful plight of Russia's homeless children wrung the whole world's heart a few years ago.

But few people realize that right here in America this winter there probably are 300,000 homeless families wandering up and down the country, welcomed nowhere, wanted nowhere, helplessly adrift, many of them slowly starving.

The Traveler's Aid knows this, all too well. Migrant people are the particular problem of this organization. Since 1868, when the first Traveler's Aid worker took up her duties on a Boston dock, until the present moment, this organization has given its exclusive attention to transients.

"One of the gravest problems which our nation faces is the rehabilitation of these refugees from economic disaster," Miss Bertha McCall, acting director of the National Traveler's Aid societies, stated.

Scattered Aid Inadequate

"The one way in which communities can help the nation solve this problem is to centralize their efforts in behalf of the drifters in their midst. Scattered aid, though well-meant, is only a drop in the bucket. Concentrated cooperation is the only thing that will count.

This is not a floating army of bums, Miss McCall insists. Over 50 per cent of them have been self-supporting, self-respecting citizens until this depression hit.

They are men and women, and their children, who may have worked all their lives in their local mills or factories. Some are families who have followed rotating crops, picking cotton in one locality, working in beet fields in another, picking fruit in another, but always working.

They are homeless and near starving now because they left their homes only after they had drained all resources, found there was absolutely no work to be had and no money for rent and food.

Want Work—Not Relief

They did not want relief. They wanted work! Having scoured their communities for work and finding none, they have packed their few possessions in old suitcases or wrapped them in burlap, dressed the children sometimes in their only suit of warm clothing, and started out.

Some families, in old flivvers, have found enough work along the way to pay for gasoline and food, always working towards some big industrial center or metropolis which offered hope of work.

Some have put their last nickel into bus fare. Still others have started the heart-breaking trek on foot, camping in abandoned barns or shacks, or even in caves or in the open, primitive fashion.

"In some sections of the country roads are crowded with these migrant families," Miss McCall said. "Shelter is precarious, food inadequate, medical care lacking. What is worse, all along their line of march, no town asks them to stay. Nobody wants them.

"Citizens Without a Country"

"The Odyssey of the unemployed migrant family is a tragedy of depression. This is the first time that there has been no

DECORATIONS FOR HOLIDAYS ARE COMPLETED

Thousands of multi-colored lights winked cheerily in the green boughs of northern fir Christmas trees in the business section of Santa Ana Saturday night as the annual holiday decorations in the city were completely installed and the lights in the trees turned on for the first time.

With two of the northern fir trees mounted on each light standard in the business district of the city, the streets took on a fairyland appearance Saturday night, lending a festive air to the shopping district, which was thronged with the usual pre-holiday crowds.

Strings of colored electric lights were placed in the Christmas trees. The decorations which are made under the auspices of the Business Men's association, assisted by other organizations, were said to be much more effective this year than last year.

The trees used this year are superior to those used last year. The foliage is heavier and they are expected to remain green throughout the holiday season. More than 100 light poles in the city have been decorated at a cost lower than last year.

The colored lights will gleam in the Christmas trees each night from now until January 1, according to statements made today by those in charge.

Merchants of the city who have cooperated in putting up the decorations are anticipating a good holiday business this year.

Bridge Tea Honors Visitor From Ohio

Coming as a charming complement to Mrs. Charles Eck of Miami, Ohio, who recently arrived here for an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. Christine Lambert of Orange, was a bridge tea of pretty appointments given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. J. R. Porter, who was hostess in her home, 245 South Blavia street.

Associates of Mrs. Lambert in the Business and Professional Women's club of Orange were guests at the affair. They were greeted in the reception hall, where sprays of mountain holly had been arranged to provide a holiday setting.

Mrs. Eck and Mrs. Lambert, receiving with Mrs. Porter, wore black and white costumes with vivid orange corsage bouquets of red roses and gardenias.

Eight tables of bridge were in session during the afternoon. Miss Mildred Anderson and Miss Marjorie Condon won first and second prizes, while Mrs. Eck received the attractive guest award. Mrs. Paul Rumbh was consoled.

A novel motif, evidenced throughout the home in the arrangement of soft-hued gladioluses, was in use at the tea table. Tall tapers, flowers and other appointments were in pastel tints. Mrs. Lambert poured tea.

Jaycee Breakfast Club Holds Park Meeting

Varying their usual custom of meeting in the Methodist Episcopal church each Sunday morning, Junior college breakfast club members gathered in Irvine park yesterday morning for an early breakfast cooked on the park grills. This was done in order to give a free Sunday to Mrs. C. Davies who has so generously given her Sunday mornings over to preparing breakfast for the club.

The meal was cooked and served by Gordon Cudworth, Ed Folger, Tom Cone and Bob Deulpre. Following the breakfast, regular discussions took place with the topic of college life as the main subject. Under this topic the discussion veered from classification of college students to the various forms of college education.

More than eighteen students were present and Dean McKee Fisk.

JANET GAYNOR AGAIN SCORES AT BROADWAY

Departing widely from their customary type of vehicle, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell prove to be more romantic and more picturesque than ever in "Tess of the Storm Country," which opened yesterday on a screen of the Fox Broadway theater.

In the colorful role of a sea-captain's daughter who comes to live ashore for the first time in her life, and who finds both her bravery and her tempestuous disposition severely tried by the various obstacles she meets, Miss Gaynor gives one of the best performances in her entire career. Farrell, as the millionaire's son, who is disowned by his treacherous father because of his interest in the heroine, likewise comes through with a flawless portrayal.

Alfred Santell's fine direction and the brilliant work of a supporting cast headed by Dudley Digges, Claude Gillingwater, June Clyde and Edward Pawley, add to the realism and entertainment qualities of this Fox Film production.

Most of the action takes place aboard a big schooner and around a rocky cove on the New England coast, providing a thoroughly marine atmosphere to the picture, and one very fitting to its swift action and many dramatic moments.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING IN-which the two could be told apart. Evidently Santini was prepared to start, and Alacia's heart sank at the thought, for somehow she had not been convinced of the driver's virtues by the colorless nature of his record in the police archives. Her every instinct told her that there was something wrong with this man, yet apparently there was nothing to be done. A few moments he would drive away to the great race which was to be run amidst the flowers and sunshine of the Riviera, and what would be the outcome? Unpleasant rumors, perhaps a scandal in the motor, or a clean victory?

She shook her head dubiously, and ran her hand across the radiator almost as affectionately as if the racing car had been alive. Then, brushing sentiment aside, she went on to an examination of the monster, running a critical eye over the immense engine beneath the gray hood, and noting with satisfaction its well oiled, cleanly state, wondering the while, just exactly how one went about throwing a race? Obviously the simplest method would be to arrange matters so that the condition of the car itself could be blamed. Once in a while, this idea was impossible to dismiss. Alacia knew almost as much about the Europa as the head mechanic at the official garage, and the temptation to check up before Santini's departure, swiftly became irresistible. She realized that after the thousand-mile trip to the south coast, this examination would be of little or no value when she was obliged to plant the Europa in the hands of Santini. She decided to be sure that on the car's departure from Paris all had been well. She wondered where Santini's mechanic might be, thinking to call him and have him start up the engine for her. Then she decided that this was unnecessary. The man was undoubtedly enjoying a hot supper in the kitchen, preparatory to the long night's sleep. Slipping off the hand-brake, Alacia gave the car a mighty shove, and it rolled easily out on to the floor where the light was better, carrying her with it on the running-board. Then she arrested its further progress and jumped down. As she did so the slave of her rough tread caught in something, and she saw that one of the screws which held the windshield in place was almost ready to fall out. It was of the very smallest importance and the loss of the screw would have meant absolutely nothing, not even a rattle in the windshield frame, but she was in a mood to be critical.

Delighted at having so promptly found a small detail which needed attending to, Alacia looked about for a screwdriver. Her instinct was to take one from the pocket of her excitement growing within her. Certainly they were not the small nuts and washers which such a bundle might logically contain. She was about to arise, with the object of examining the sack to better advantage under the light when a voice in the doorway startled her into letting it fall back into the tool-box where she had found it.

"Drop that!" someone commanded harshly. "How dare you touch my car?"

It was Santini, and his face was livid. Behind him stood her mother and the mechanic who was to accompany Santini to the south. Alacia had been so absorbed by her sense of being on the verge of an important discovery, that she had not even heard them enter. But now with an effort she found her voice and blazed back at him, a hatred equal to his own gleaming in her eyes.

"Your car," she challenged. "It's my car, actually, and I'll examine it when and how I choose. Before answering, he pushed past her, almost knocking her over in his furious haste, and slammed down the lid of the tool-box, removing the key.

"So long as I drive it, this car is mine!" he roared at her. "I forbid you to lay a hand on it. I am responsible for its condition until after the race, and I am shocked and surprised at your interference." Now that the tool-box was locked, he seemed to calm down a little, but he shook the key he had removed, at her in a threatening manner. "How, may I ask, do you come to have an uplicate key? Is your factory full of them?"

"That key is mine!" said Alacia, coolly, taking it from him. "The cars are twins, as you perfectly well know. As for my doing the slightest harm, that is ridiculous. I can handle any car as well as you can, Santini, and I think you are aware that I have particular reasons for wishing to be sure this one reaches Monte Carlo in good shape." If he read any hidden meaning behind her level glance, he did not betray the fact.

"I don't mean to disparage your knowledge of cars, Mademoiselle Alacia," he said more mildly. "Your acknowledged skill as a driver, but I still insist that you must not interfere with this one while it is in my charge. He turned to Mrs. Santini with a look which asked for confirmation and immediately the older woman rallied to his support.

"He's quite right, Alacia," said Mrs. Santini. "You had no business fooling with it. If anything went wrong, he'd get the blame. Stand away now, child, or you see they are trying to get off!"

"I certainly can see just that!" her daughter replied emphatically, thinking of that little chamois bag and what it might contain. If only she could detain them until she could make sure!

The big volcano with puffed smoke and Duncy said, "This is no joke. Suppose lava starts to flow. What will we Tynmites do?" "I will admit the sight is great, but it is safe to breathe around the monstrous crater just to witness something new!" "Oh, so far we are safe and sound, so I am going to hold my ground," said Duncy. "You're a ruddy cat. You always want to win."

"Let's just sit down and eye the heat. Then, if it turns out indigestible, we all can jump and wait in the meantime we'll have fun."

No down they sat, still very chilled. "Twice strange the way the smoke puffs filled the air and men were carried off by little bits of breeze."

In moments when the breeze died down the smoke would settle toward the ground. At one time Duncy said, "We'd better stop to our knees."

"The smoke will shortly rise again and keep from choking us," said then the Tynmites heard a rumbling sound and Duncy cried, "Oh, dear!"

"It sounds like trouble's going to come. Just listen to that crash. I'm still of the opinion that we'd best get out of here."

"In fact, though you may want to stay, I think I'll travel on my way. I'll see you later, far below, where I'll be safe and sound."

He walked a little ways and then heard Duncy shout to him again. "Hey! Look what's coming into view!" And Duncy turned around.

You can imagine his surprise when, right before his very eyes, he saw some wee tots climbing from the crater and the smoke.

One shouted, "We are hotshots. We'll have some fun. Oh, lots and lots. Please do not run and leave us. We are friendly. It's no joke."

An experiment anyone can try. . . . Strips of cloth are pulled through the crack to imitate down-flowing currents . . . and the layers of thicker material above them are folded into "mountain ranges" by their movement.

By DR. FRANK THONE

THE earth's interior is "boiling" like a soup kettle, with the continents floating on the surface like flakes of scum. Only the "soup" does its boiling in terms of thousands of years instead of minutes, and is thousands of times as stiff as glass instead of being fluid as water, so that its movements are naturally slow.

This is, in rough outline, the picture sketched by Professor Arthur Holmes of the University of Durham, England, to account for the rate at which the earth is losing its heat, for the way mountains are built, and for many other things that have happened during the old planet's long geological history—and are still happening.

Scientists have known for a long time that the earth is losing heat. Not only does all the warmth poured upon its surface by the sun eventually go off into space again; a good deal more goes besides.

The earth is no glowing star like the sun, and its heat radiation is of a great deal lower order, but it is there just the same, and in really measurable quantities.

The first theories put forward by geologists to account for this stock of buried heat which the earth is constantly spending began with the notion that at the outset the earth was hot like the sun and simply assumed that the heat now being lost was only the faint afterglow of its pristine fires—just as a stove keeps radiating for a while after its fire has gone out.

THE great English physicist, Lord Kelvin, based his calculation of the earth's age on this simple assumption, and arrived at a maximum figure of 40 million years.

This estimated age of Mother Earth might have been very flattering to her; but the geologists and evolutionists protested that she couldn't possibly be that young: they had been looking into her diary, and had found a lot of things recorded that must have happened much longer ago than a mere 40 million years.

The physicist had to stand pat: he could estimate how much heat the earth had had in its infancy, and here was a known rapidity of loss. Unless there was some other source he didn't know about, to add heat to the earth's original birth-gift brought from the sun, he could not change his figures.

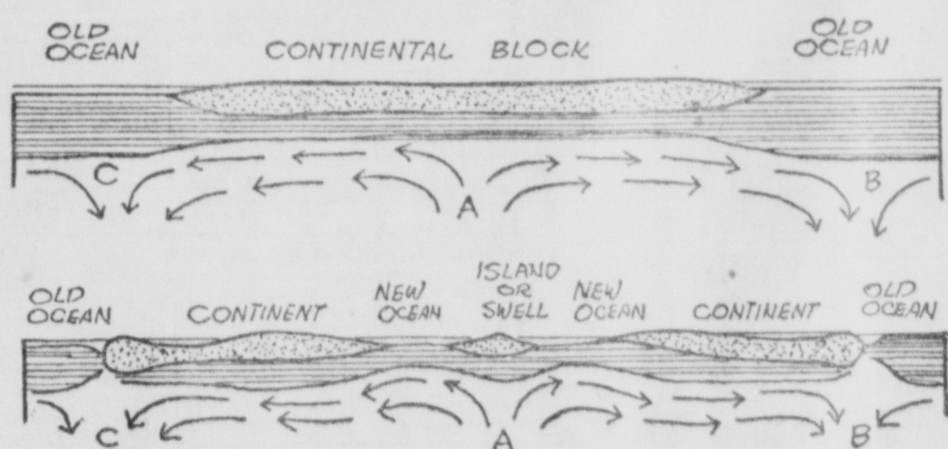

This impasse between geophysicists and geologists was broken when radium and its related elements were discovered and their activities understood. Radioactive elements break down, automatically transmuting themselves into other less active elements, and in so doing give off energy that can express itself as heat.

Radium and its relatives, thorium and uranium, were found in at least minute amounts in practically all the rocks of the earth's crust. The old familiar element, potassium, was also found to be radioactive. Its radioactivity is only feeble, but there is such a lot of potassium that even this little adds up like pennies in a Scotch kid's savings bank.

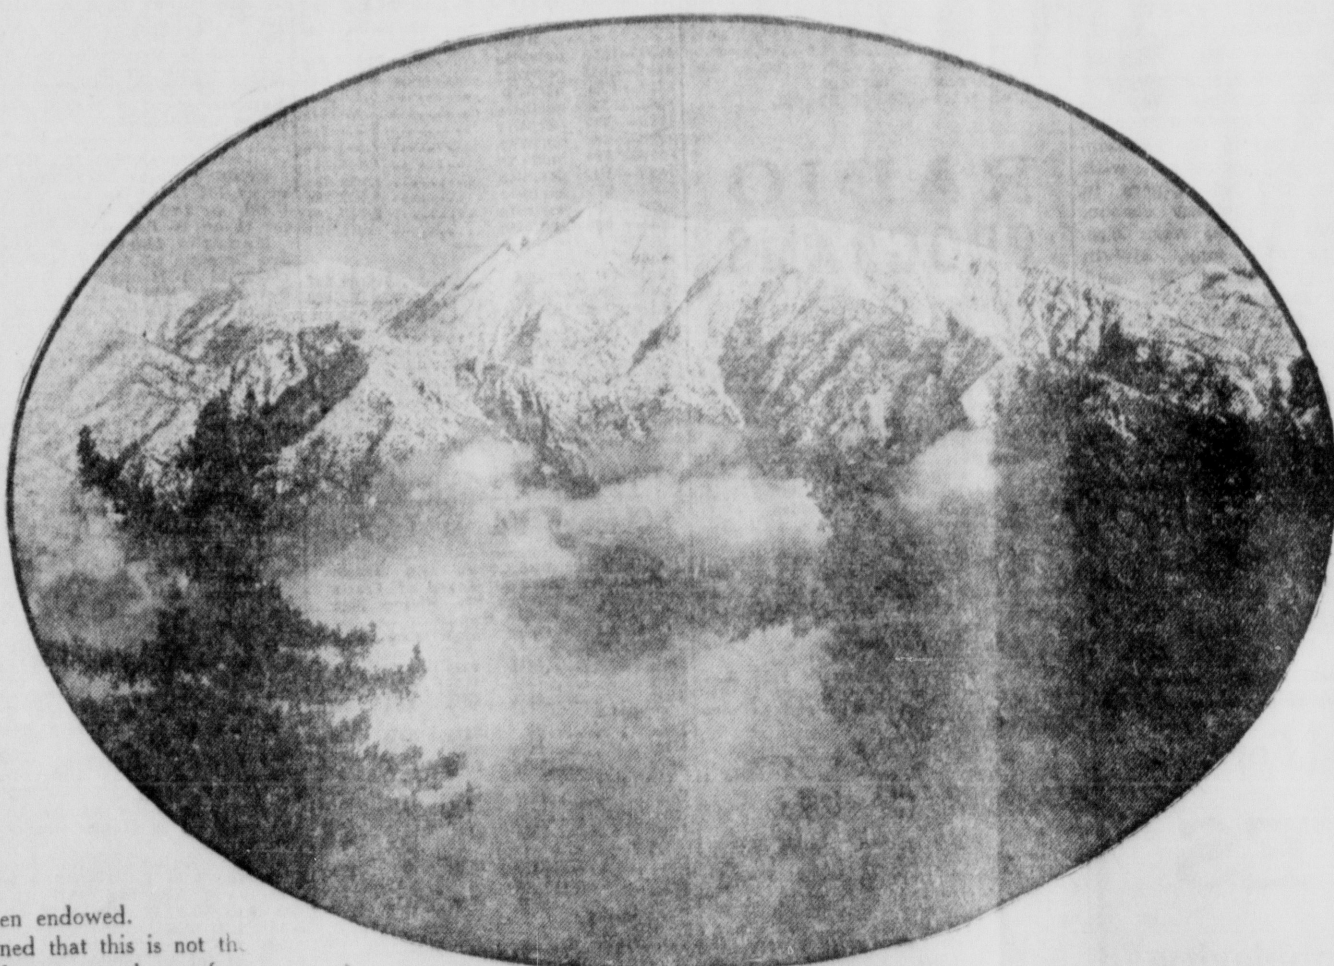

HERE, then, was the supplementary source of heat, that would allow for a slower spending of the original solar dowry and thereby permit Earth to claim her proper age—which is, however, not yet known with anything like final definiteness.

The first rocks examined for radioactive contents yielded an embarrassment of riches in energy. There was too much of it to account for the earth's radiation, if all the rocks clear down to the center were as richly endowed as the surface granites and their kin-stones have been endowed.

But it was soon learned that this is not the case. Granitic rocks from near the surface contain far more radium and allied elements than the basalts from deeper in the crust; and the basalts in turn are very much more radio-contains platinum—between three and four-tenths of one per cent of it. Considering the fact that the metallic core of the earth is about 4000 miles in diameter, even this small fraction would make a very tidy lump.

WHY the Earth Is Like a Soup Kettle

BUT to return to the radium. Little though there is of it per ton, in the earth's core and the deep rock hundreds of miles "down in," there are dizzying numbers of tons to reckon with, and the total heat production is vast.

Unless there is some mechanism for getting it to the surface and letting it radiate off into space, along with the residual heat from the earth's metal supply, part of the earth's interior would certainly be too fluid for our ultimate comfort, and the rest too stiff.

Professor Holmes' hypothesis boldly visions the solid deep rock, the apparently rigid peridotite, as being fluid enough to "boil" with a rising motion, just like the currents that rise in a kettle of soup that is getting good and hot. This "boiling" process, of course, is exceedingly slow, extending over thousands on thousands of years.

In a soup kettle, the boiling currents flow upward in the middle, the area of greatest heat, then outward along the top and down the sides to the bottom again as the liquid cools a little and is replaced by fresh supplies of hotter stuff.

THE bottom of Professor Holmes' kettle is the middle of the earth. The currents he visions flow toward the surface, discharge their burden of heat, then as they cool sink toward the center again.

It may take many thousands of years for the kettle to bubble once; but time is one thing about which geological history is not in the least stingy.

With currents thus flowing up, and along just under the surface, and then down again, they must naturally establish a regular set of circuits, just as the boiling soup in the kettle does. Professor Holmes thinks in terms of a main circulation flowing from the earth's core toward the surface near the equator, then along the surface (or rather, just under the 35-mile crust) to the polar regions, then down toward the core again.

That 35-mile-thick crust of basaltic rock, that forms the bottoms of all the oceans and apparently also underlies the lighter, thinner rock masses of the continents, coats the kettle like a tough film. On top of it the granites lie, like lighter masses of scum.

When the boiling from underneath heaves the basaltic film, the gigantic scum-masses slide about, wrinkling their edges in the direction toward which they are sliding. Thus are mountain folds thrown up on the edges of continents, Professor Holmes thinks; for he is one of those geologists who believe in the theory of shifting and migrating continents, most notably advocated by the great German scientist, von Wegener.

THE movements in the crust due to the "boiling" underneath not only shift the continental masses about; they tear them apart, Professor Holmes believes. A current from underneath may make two continents where only one was before, and at the same time leave an island chain or a subterranean ridge midway between them.

One of Professor Holmes' colleagues performed a very interesting and simple experiment. He laid a couple of strips of canvas along the top of a table, with their ends dropping down through a crack in the middle. These represented currents of the deep rock "soup," meeting and sinking toward the earth's core.

On top of these he laid several layers of thick woolen cloth, to represent strata of the earth's crust. Then he pulled the ends of his canvas strips downward. The superimposed cloth layers folded into beautiful "mountains"!

In a rough but effective way, this illustrates very aptly the way in which the subterranean "boiling" creates real mountains.

Boiling currents, like those in a pot, bring energy from the interior and also are the cause of land movement and building of mountains active than are the still deeper rocks, called peridotites, that are assumed to make up the bulk of the stony material of the globe, filling all the space between the surface crust and the rigid central core, which is believed to be a solid lump of metal.

The differences in radioactive elements contained in surface and "deep" rocks are most striking. Professor Holmes states that in average "crustal" rocks that make up the earth's surface to an estimated average depth of 35 miles there is the equivalent of one ounce of radium to 10,000,000 tons.

Samples of the deeper peridotitic rock that crop out on the surface in places indicate an equivalent of an ounce of radium to a billion tons. The crustal rocks therefore are 100 times as rich in radioactive elements as are the deep rocks that make up the mass of the earth's substance.

YET even with their small radium content, these deep rocks generate a terrific amount of heat. Neither must the radioactivity of the earth's metallic core be overlooked in the calculations, even though it is probably less than that of the deep rock.

Professor Holmes has likened this iron-nickel core to the cook stove of his "soup-kettle" earth—with the difference that it is in the kettle instead of under it.

Geophysicists as a whole are pretty thoroughly convinced that there is a solid lump of metal occupying the center of the earth for about a half of its diameter. The metal is more than hot enough to melt, but the terrific pressure of the overlying rock depths keeps it in a solid state. Incidentally (for it has no direct connection with his hypothesis) Professor Holmes has estimated that this iron-nickel core also

YOUNG ANAHEIM HOUSE DESTROYED BY BLAZE SUNDAY
COUPLE WEDDED HERE SUNDAY

ANAHEIM, Nov. 28.—At the candlelight hour of 4 o'clock Miss Virginia Allen Grange, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Grange, of West Broadway street, became the bride of Warren Lammiman, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Lammiman of West Anaheim, in a formal ceremony solemnized yesterday afternoon at the White Temple Methodist Episcopal church before 400 guests. The Rev. Virgil K. Ledbetter of the Calvary Baptist church officiated.

With only candlelight to illuminate the picturesque setting of palms, tall beeches, yellow, bronze and white cypripediums on the dais and an archway of white lattice work intertwined with greenery and "mums" before the bride party stood, a half hour pipe organ recital was given by Mrs. Mabel Eberhard, who also played during the service. Mrs. Horace Hemphaw sang "At Dawning," "I Love You Truly" and "O Promise Me," before Lammiman's wedding march which heralded the entry of the bride party.

The bride, entering on the arm of her father, was beautifully gowned in a long, close fitting white satin gown, made with long, pointed sleeves, a v-shaped neck and flaring below the knees. The tulle veil, made with a train, was caught up over her head with a comb and carried a shower bouquet of white roses, lilies of the valley and white sweetpeas.

Miss Mary Simon was the maid of honor and wore a frock of green tulle, made in pointed lines and carried a bouquet of Tailsman roses. The bridesmaids, all dressed alike in pastel colors of crepe were Miss Anna Lammiman, sister of the bridegroom, in pale green, Miss Berta Clyde of Huntington Beach, in yellow, Miss Pauline Hinds in orchid and Miss Polly Ballou in peach. They carried bouquets of bovardia and sweetpeas.

The bride's father was Joan Ball of Anaheim who was prettily frocked in a long dress of green net over green tulle, and carried a basket of flowers. Jimmy Hark, dressed in a short black velvet suit, with a jacket and white satin blouse was the ring bearer.

Owen Lammiman, brother of the bridegroom acted as best man. The ushers were Horace Hemphaw, Clyde Bowman and Alvin Perrin of West Anaheim and Fred Brassfield of Redlands.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for fifty close friends and afternoon gown of red velvet and wearing a corsage of white bovardia and gardenias and Mrs. Lammiman, wearing a brown crepe gown and a corsage of bovardia and pink sweetpeas greeted the guests.

Following the serving of light refreshments and the cutting of the wedding cake by the bride and informal musical was held with Miss Mary Simon performing at the piano. Mrs. Bert Moody of Chino, Mrs. Robert Uhl of Ontario and the bridesmaids assisted in the serving.

Immediately following the reception the new Mr. and Mrs. Lammiman left for a week's honeymoon in Yosemite National Park. Upon their return they will make their home here. Mrs. Lammiman wore, for her traveling outfit, a brown suit with a beaver fur collar and matching accessories.

The bride is a graduate of the Anaheim Union high school and for the past two years has been attending the University of Redlands. The bridegroom is also a graduate of the Anaheim Union high school and

Anaheim Police Notes

ANAHEIM, Nov. 28.—W. P. Brown of 331 South Olive street reported to the police station Saturday morning that a lady's purse was lost between Anaheim and Fullerton on Friday night. A driver's license belonging to Miss Rita Hauch of Santa Ana and a diamond ring valued at $175 was in it. The purse was later found.

Richard Martinez, Roberto Martinez and David Valdez, Mexican children, were caught by police yesterday morning stealing a newspaper from Judge Frank Tausch's home. They were to appear in court this morning.

Johnnie Harned and Harold George Harned were each fined $10 or five days in the county jail this morning when they appeared in the recorder's court on a charge of petty theft. They were arrested last night for taking a chair off the porch of the Colonial apartments.

At the moment his name was not before the convention, F. D. was sitting far to the rear of the hall, engaged in a personal conversation. An enthusiastic delegate interrupted with:

"You're nominating you! You're nominating you!" said Roosevelt, and resumed his talk. Presently he left the hall.

When Governor Alfred E. Smith had made the seconding speech and the adjourning convention had jumped to its feet, cheering, stamping, Franklin D. Roosevelt arose with a start at his hotel to find himself the running-mate of Cox by acclamation. Vice-presidential nominee at an age four years younger than T. R. had been when he ran with McKinley.

MATTERS COMING BEFORE CONGRESS

Three important matters are coming before Congress as it convenes for the short session on December 5. One of these is the balancing of the budget, which spells, in other words, economy. This economy must come with a vengeance, if the budget is to be balanced.

New tax resources must be found, and this will make life exceedingly interesting. To be sure, it is expected that a great deal of it will be raised by a tax on beer. Looking at this purely from an economic point of view, we believe there is going to be serious disappointment. There will not be immediately a beer drinking public. The first few days after a legalized emporium for the sale of beer is open, there may be a considerable run, but according to the brewers themselves, the appetite of the youth has not kept going as it was in pre-prohibition days, and they will have to cultivate it, so that there will not be the amount of beer drinking that is anticipated.

Another reason why there will not be as much drunk is that a large portion of wage earners, who are largely the beer-drinkers, are today, after all, unemployed, and taxes cannot be paid on beer sold on credit.

More than this, it probably will be found that money which is being paid for beer is being taken from other industries, and they will languish just in proportion as the beer industry succeeds. For while nearly every other line of expense makes it possible to earn more money, unfortunately there is nothing gained in producing power to a man because he has drunk 25 or 40 cents worth of beer. With a matter of shoes, it helps him go out and earn another pair of shoes, or earn other things. The same is true of clothing, but beer is a net loss.

In other words, we feel there will be just simply a transfer of income from some other sources to beer, in proportion as the government gets the tax on beer.

A third proposition which the government must meet is that of relief. In the light of the failure of Community Chests and the raising of relief funds through personal donations, more and more it seems as though the Federal government must be depended upon for help before spring. Just how far it will be wise, or it will be able to go, is a serious question.

Other matters relating to foreign trade, and the recognition of Russia, will be emphasized by many commercial organizations, but other countries are looking to trade with Russia, and some of our manufacturers feel that America is losing out foolishly.

The United States has taken her position as the leading creditor nation. She has unbounded wealth. She lacks, however, the tradition, the background, and the statesmanship that seems to be grounded in the directors of Great Britain's policy, as well as of other nations, which we may also call "imperial." We will get it through the experience of years, but by making, of course, many mistakes.

Prosperity is near. On December 15 England is supposed to pay the United States $95,550,000, France $10,261,432 and Italy $1,245,437—all payments on war debts. But let's wait until December 16 before we plan a party.

BEHIND THE ECONOMY DRIVE

An article of timely interest by Stuart Chase, whose writings are always illuminating, is printed in the December number of Scribners. He believes in the national drive for economy, but he is very skeptical about the forces behind it. He sees a tendency to cut down expenditures from the amounts now paid to veterans, which he heartily approves. But he notes that those engaged in the drive for economy are apt to think that money spent for playgrounds, parks, recreation facilities, child welfare, pure food and drug control, the Bureau of Standards, the forest service, and like public services is a waste, and therefore might well be done away with in times of depression. As if such services were luxuries pure and simple.

Mr. Chase, therefore, calls for a scientific study to determine where economies can be made without cutting out real and necessary services. Of course, he has little use for the vast expenditure of the army and navy. And he notes that the group which is engaged in the economy drive has little to say about saving money there. Why? As John Maynard Keynes has said, a budget may be balanced so perfectly that it will end in a cipher on both sides; but it will find us flat on our backs.

There are expenditures which are very large, but which return very much more than they entail. A familiar illustration is road building. We pay four or five cents per gallon as a tax on gasoline. There is a tax of 25 per cent. But when we think of how much we save in gas on good roads as compared with mud roads, how much we save on tires and the wear and tear of our autos, and save in time, we shall find that we have gained much more than we have lost. Similar illustrations abound. There is an economy which is sheer waste, and there is a thrift which is foolish and wasteful, as all of us have found out when we have saved a piece of string, carefully put it away for future use, only to find that it isn't long enough, strong enough, so tangled that we waste five minutes in getting it untangled, or have it break on us when the tying-up job is just about to be completed. A new piece of string would have been a real saving, financially and in temper.

WORLD WIDE TENSION OVER DEBTS

The nations of Europe are very likely to emphasize to our government that while they may be able actually to transfer the money this year in December, that it is going to be disastrous to the world to do so. It seems that a year ago last June, when President Hoover agreed to the moratorium for a year, the conditions in Germany seemed to make such an action imperative.

It will be recalled that the Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, was at that time in England. He is now there as our ambassador. He probably is in as close touch with finance as any man can possibly be. He will know something of whether the statements of the nations are statements commonly called "bluff," or whether they are realities. He will probably have considerable influence in whatever final decision is made upon it.

We doubt if Congress will change its mind. Certainly no nation will want to "default," for that means that her credit in the markets of the world is gone. It may be if Congress insists, and our administration maintains its position, that we will see exactly what effect the payment of the debts will have. And then we will know whether our theories are correct or not.

If what they desire will happen is to happen, to be sure, it will be too late to remedy it, but whatever we meet other such precipitation, maybe we would be able to meet our difficulties now in a better way than we could in a year or two hence.

"Conceit is a form of ill health," a scientist says. Never mind the man who pats himself on the back. He may just be the victim of lumbago.

STUDIES OF OUR TIMES

The list of publications of new books reveals a great number of books which vividly present the times through which most of us have been living. There are the books written by Mark Sullivan, three of which have already appeared, and of Robert Allen, who leads us through the decade of the twenties. Then in England there is Wingfield-Stratton's "The Victorian Sunset," one of a trilogy of books covering the period from the death of Victoria to the present.

The remarkable thing about all these books is that they are so novel, although the scene has been played right before our eyes. The "gay 90's" are so queer to us, and yet when we were going through them, they were perfectly normal. Last year's styles and last year's manners have already become romantic. It only illustrates how little we observe, and what a feeble impression is left upon us by the things which go on before our eyes.

Kitty Hawk Memorial

Oakland Tribune

On Kill Devil Hills, Kitty Hawk, the other day, a shaft was unveiled as a memorial to Orville and Wilbur Wright who, at that spot, flew the first airplane driven by a motor. For twelve full seconds Orville Wright flew, on December 17, 1903, and it was then that the little settlement crying "They did it! They did it! They did it!"

It was the start of a new story and for good reason visitors since have stood on the desolate spot where modern aviation was born. Commenting on the unveiling of the shaft, the New York Times makes comparisons and dwells upon the rapidity with which the new machine was developed. After that historic 17th of December, it says, the world knew that flying by man was not far off. Transportation by ship and railroad train has been slow of development, but swift was the improvement of the airplane. Twelve years after the genesis of two Americans had made the dream of Leonardo da Vinci a reality, men were fighting in flying machines in France; in sixteen years an airplane was flown across the Atlantic, and not long afterward every ocean had been spanned by aviators, the world had been circumnavigated, and on all the continent regular services for mail, freight and passengers were in operation. Man's first flight in an engine-driven plane was measured by feet. In 1921 air transport routes regularly flown attained 130,000 miles. Nothing in the history of civilization is more impressive than the conquest of the air by man in the years following the flight of about 500 feet by Orville Wright at Kitty Hawk in a crude plane propelled by an engine of twelve-horsepower. The granite shaft dedicated today bears upon its face the names of the immortal brothers, but the honor to them is also a silent testimony to the inventiveness, courage and fortitude of other men who developed the airplane for commercial uses and braved the perils of sea and desert to prove its worth as a means of transportation.

College Figures Indicate Race May Become Smaller

San Bernardino Sun

Anthropological researches conducted at Harvard university disclose the fact that Harvard men today comprise one of the tallest groups of men in the world. Their average height is 5 feet 10 1/2 inches. The only listed group which is taller is a tribe in Central Africa which averages 5 feet 11 1/2 inches per adult male.

This is but part of the story. Harvard men today are taller and heavier than their fathers and grandfathers, and still growing. They gain height at the rate of one inch every generation. While they have gained in weight, it has not been at the same rate, indicating that they are slenderer, in proportion, than their fathers. If the present rate of increase in growth continues, it is figured that the Harvard class of 1932 will average more than 6 feet in height and more than 160 pounds in weight.

Similar growth in college women is revealed by the section of the study which deals with height and weight statistics gathered at Vassar, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges. Today's girls are taller and heavier—and more slender—than their mothers.

Where does all this gain in stature lead—to a new race of giants? And will mental development keep pace with physical development?

More Truth Than Poetry

RENUNCIATION

When I learned that the right kind of diet, Combined with the right sort of drink, Will lighten the strain on an overworked brain, And lighten the power to think, I consulted the family doctor As to what sort of food I might need To put pep in my head, but he sneeringly said: "You first must have something to feed."

A specialist next I applied to Who seemed overcome with surprise When I asked if a man by subsisting on bran And spinach may eat and grow wise. The old fellow wagged the whiskers Which over his visage grew lush, Pouched a ten-dollar fee, and remarked: "Hark to me; You can't make a brain out of mush!"

Disturbed, but still boldly determined, I made a brave effort to find Some sort of a rare and salubrious fare That would build up my putative mind. I have lived for six months upon seaweed, Eaten hay that was dried in the rack, Taken lodine straight in its natural state, And still I am hopelessly thick.

But, now that my years are declining, No more for distinction I sigh; I wolf buckwheat cakes and thick porterhouse steaks, Welsh rarebits, and tripe and mince pie. These viands may keep me from rising To heights that are grand and sublime; I may never lay claim to a vestige of fame, But at least I shall have a good time.

Now if there was some way to let crooners and sex novelists know that the people want a change. Now that statesmen have a clear mandate from the people, their next job is to guess what it is. How strange it will seem when a President has Congress at his back instead of on his hands. The landslide at least served to let the depression know what people think of it. Don't confuse them. "Bologna" appeals to an empty stomach, "bologna" to an empty head.

A BOOK PUBLISHER SAYS WOMEN ENJOY MYSTERIES. SO THAT'S WHY THEY KEEP THOSE HALF-EMPTY BOTTLES IN THE MEDICINE CLOSET.

There are two kinds. If it is the fruit of discontent, it is spelled "rubbery." Of course sickness is a worse trouble than bankruptcy. A man doesn't resolve to quit his sins because he's bankrupt. England seems to have overcome the Red menace. Britons never will be Slavs.

AMERICANISM: Boasting of our efficiency and humanity; wondering what to do with a surplus while millions live in want.

The taxpayer has one advantage. He can work for his country without spending money to get elected. When shall we know who will influence the "new deal"? Let's hope it won't be long. Not Huey, anyway. "The new generation has no respect for the old gods." No, indeed. It doesn't even know the significance of "Tinker to Evers to Chance."

OUR CHIEF TROUBLE IS THAT EACH CITIZEN KNOWS HOW TO CONTROL MANKIND AND WISHES HE KNEW HOW TO CONTROL HIS THREE KIDS.

Alas! If he is sure to go down in history, he is so apt to go down now. France thinks all European countries should contribute to a military force established to keep order. She will contribute the Generalissimo.

Well, what this country needed was a man with experience in overcoming paralysis. Carrying the pigskin attracts fewer customers this year because people are more interested in carrying the frogskin.

CORRECT THIS SENTENCE: "I HELPED ELECT HIM FOR THE GOOD OF THE COUNTRY," SAID THE MAN, "AND I'M NOT GOING TO ASK FOR A JOB."

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

A NEW POLITICAL PARTY

While in New York the other week and I found many men of responsible business and professional reputation wondering whether the dramatic over-turn of the recent election was so much a whole-hearted turning from the Republican to the Democratic party as a preliminary shrug of the national shoulders presaging the formation of a new party four years hence.

It may have been. If so, I hope it will be more than the long-discussed regrouping of the voting millions into a conservative and a liberal alignment.

I say this because I am convinced that political liberalism in America is today about as bankrupt of productive ideas as political conservatism.

A fairly clear line of cleavage can be drawn between political conservatives and political liberals on most of the major issues.

The conservative is more likely to be a swashbuckling nationalist showing a high-hat to the rest of the world.

The liberal is more likely to realize the interdependence of the modern world and be less irritatingly provincial in foreign policy.

The conservative is more likely to go easy on accepting national responsibility for unemployment relief.

The liberal is more likely to go far in the matter of federal aid for unemployment relief.

The conservative is more likely to proceed cautiously in lavish public works to create employment.

The liberal is more likely to go the limit in public expenditures for public works as a means of making work.

The conservative is more likely to lean backwards in defense of what we call stable money.

The liberal is more likely to be open-minded on the possible wisdom of a controlled inflation, suspecting that the last word has not yet been said on what is sound money.

The conservative is more likely to be hard on the matter of inter-governmental debts.

The liberal is more likely to be willing to adjust inter-governmental debts in the manner that will best promote world recovery even if the readjustment means writing much off the books.

But the more deeply we look into the current situation the more clearly do we see that none of these differences hits at the real issue of depression and recovery.

Neither American conservatism nor American liberalism, as voiced in current political discussion, faces the central fact that American civilization has come definitely to the end of an era and that we now face a new era for which our existing economic procedures nor our existing political policies are adequate.

The next new political party, if it is to mean anything vital, must be built around a program dealing with the central fact that the potential productive capacity of our machine economy has become such that no existing or proposed policy of wages, prices, profits and political control can keep our people employed or our standard of living up.

Mr. Roosevelt is right in saying we need a New Deal, but this New Deal must deal with this situation created by science and technology or it will be but a New Shovel.

CHECK UP NOW

Along about the early part of December is the time to check up on a school child's work. Study his latest report card. If there are signs that he is falling in a subject, if any of his marks are failing off this is the time to take up the matter, not at the end of the term. Talk first to the child and remember that your attitude on this is of first importance.

If you take the time that the child has neglected his work and disgraced himself you won't get very far. Go about it gently. Ask him where he thinks he's trouble is and when he says, "Aw, she never gives me a chance," don't fly up at him and end the conference in a tense situation. Listen. Keep on listening. Let him say all he has to say. It is his own defense and question him further. By and by he will begin to disclose something of his difficulty and that is what you need.

After you have talked to the boy go to see the teacher. Once more you must go about your task tactfully and in the spirit of helpfulness. The teacher is your partner, your working partner. Unless she is with you strongly, you are not going to succeed. Tell the teacher you want to do all you can to keep the child from going steadily and ask her what you can do. Then plan with her. Don't be satisfied until you can answer these questions.

Why is the child falling behind? What must be done first to make up the falling? How much more work has he to cover before the term ends? Can you simplify it? Can you make a schedule of work that will enable the child to complete his work well within the time and allow him some time for review and reorganization?

You see you have not only to bring the child up to the standard just now, you have to plan to help him maintain that standard. You cannot do the work for him but you can so organize his work in cooperation with the teacher that he can carry on for himself. All you can do now you have found the difficulty, strengthened it, laid out the term plan, as to stand on the sidelines and cheer. He must do the work. The child knows this and if you ever think up for him and give him a good start, he has renewed confidence and goes to work in a better mood. Discouragement keeps a child from working. When he has a poor mark and sees no way of getting a better one his mind

NO TAILS FOR PAT

A wealthy Irishman was proud of the opportunity to "show off" on the occasion of a visit to London of one of his compatriots. He invited him to dine at a fashionable restaurant.

"Now, me boy," he said, "just you follow my lead and I'll order everything of the best."

Seated at the table the host led off with: "Waiter, a couple of cocktails."

His friend regarded him with astonishment and then whispered audibly: "Waiter, if ye don't mind, I'd rather have a wing."—Tit-bits.
